

I so much appreciate this English class (GED0001 course) because it has helped me improve and become more confident in speaking the English language. My professor, Ma'am Maica Regina M. Escosio, is so kind and never makes the class feel boring. We always have fun during her lessons, and I truly admire how she treats her students with respect. She never embarrasses anyone when they make mistakes, which makes the learning environment comfortable and supportive. I really, really love this class because it encouraged me to step out of my comfort zone and express myself more freely in English.

This class has also improved my writing. It offered useful help in designing my focus, developing my sentences clearly, and slicing the improvements into the ideas I was trying to say. The skills I gained on grammar and vocabulary, along with the construction of sentences, were particularly helpful. Along the way, I also learned how to write various styles of essays and reports, which I will need in both academic and professional dialogue. I observed improvements with every writing opportunity and became increasingly comfortable with my writing skills. This class was not exclusively about writing and speaking—but our discussions also made me think about how communication matters. I think I will move into the next phase of my life and employ those skills to impact personal and professional relationships. I was able to talk in groups and presentations with classmates as I developed my communication skills. Learning to listen, respond to my classmates, and appreciate their thoughts and reasons for speaking made me a better listener, too.

Additionally, GED0001 helped me improve how to create a thesis paper step by step. She taught us how to properly draft and organize our ideas, from developing a clear thesis statement to conducting research and citing sources correctly. This course is really important to me because I'm a first-year college student, and soon, I will be making my thesis paper. So, this course is helping me improve, and it's beneficial not only for my thesis or my school journey but also for my future in what they call the "real world." It also helped me improve my English speaking skills. This is especially helpful since my dream is to become the CEO of my own company. As a CEO, it's essential to be able to communicate well in English, especially during meetings with people from different backgrounds. I just wanted to share a bit about my dream.

Overall, my experience in the GED0001 course has been incredibly enriching. I am grateful for the knowledge and confidence I gained, as well as the supportive environment created by Ma'am Maica Regina M. Escosio. This class has prepared me to tackle future academic challenges and communicate more effectively in English. I will always remember the lessons and experiences from this course, and I am excited to apply everything I've learned in my future endeavors.
